

Signs Your Child has a Learning Disability

With the school year in full swing, you may wonder about your child's academic development. If you're concerned with your child's learning, specialists in the child's school can test him or her for a learning disability. If they are diagnosed, the DES Vocational Rehabilitation (VR) program can help by providing specialized supports depending on your child's needs.

Here are common signs of a learning disability:

- Difficulty understanding class subjects including reading, writing, and math
- Trouble paying attention and/or staying focused
- Frustration, irritation and/or fatigue at school
- Problems with coordination and organization

For more information about the DES VR program, please visit www.azdes.gov/rsa.

*Source: National Institutes of Health